QUOTES/REVIEWS:

SAVING COUNTRY MUSIC - USA

"Beyond the authenticity and the clear rudimentary study of country music that Roo displays in his music, Cowboys and Sunsets is remarkable in how it sounds just like some lost album from the sweet spot of the career of Alan Jackson or George Strait, or even a little bit of James Hand when they were still young and hungry and trying to prove themselves."

COUNTRY MUSIC PEOPLE MAGAZINE - UK (Duncan Warwick)

"This is one of those albums that could be best described as 'the best record George Strait never made'". (This Here Cowboy)

CAPITAL NEWS MAGAZINE- AUS

"Who better to create and perform such music than a man who knows what life on the land is like, who's lived through its trials and triumphs, and who is passionate about communicating those experiences through amazing songs".

COUNTRY UPDATE MAGAZINE – AUS

"Orthodox, Boot-cut Country, working class country that strides straight down the center isle of the church of country music".

A LITTLE MORE OF THE STORY...

Roo, his wife and two children live on a 500-acre ranch on the Southern Tablelands of New South Wales in Australia. They run a cattle breeding operation consisting of Angus and Murray Greys. Prior to settling down on the family farm, Roo had worked extensively on some very big ranches across Australia... including one as large as 2.3 million acres, running 40,000 head of Santa Gertrudis cattle. This is where Roo began singing and writing about his life's experiences. Roo is a family man, who takes great pride in being the same man on stage as he is in life. A humble and honest man with strong values, who stays true to his own path.
